EMPOWERING READING EVERYWHERE
LETTER FROM THE CO-FOUNDERS

Reading is power. It teaches you about the world, expands your mind, and gives you the tools that let you make your own decisions. And hey, it's fun too—nothing wrong with that! Having the ability to read unlocks the door to your future.

Our world is going digital. We see it in the United States, where cars are driving themselves; we see it in Europe, where e-book sales are outpacing physical book sales. And we see it in the developing world, where more people have access to a mobile phone than a working toilet.

Put reading and the global digital movement together and there's only one conclusion: we've got a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to address a huge inequity, and put books into the hands of every person on the planet. Children in the slums of Kenya can now read on a cheap tablet; young adults in the fields of Ghana can read on their cell phone; Mothers in New Delhi can read to their children on whatever device they have.

In 2014, with the immense help of our supporters, partners and collaborators, we've done something historic: we've enabled over one million people in the developing world to read more, read better and harness the power of reading to improve their own lives.

Each month, more than 185,000 people in Africa, Asia and beyond read compelling and relevant e-books on e-readers and inexpensive mobile phones. As a result, in 2014, children, families and adults spent over 4,000,000 hours reading from a library of 15,000 digital books.

We’re thrilled to be delivering on our mission of Books for All—and even more thrilled to be doing it with you. 2015 and beyond holds so much more for Worldreader and all the people we serve. We thank you for supporting us so far and look forward the journey ahead.

Let’s write the next chapter together.

David Risher
Colin McElwee

2014 KEY RESEARCH

Project LEAP (Libraries, E-reading, Activities, Partnership) funded by the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation

Project LEAP was a groundbreaking pilot program implemented over 2014 by Worldreader in partnership with eight public and community libraries in Western Kenya, and funded by the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation. The one-year pilot tested the use, function and adoption of 200 e-readers in selected libraries to determine how e-readers affect library patronage, communities, staff, policies and procedures. Results from the project include:

178% increase in library visits over the course of 8 months

84% of patrons surveyed reported reading more with e-readers

20,000+ patrons trained on e-reader usage

The number of people reading on our platforms has consistently increased since 2010.

2014 KEY RESEARCH

Reading in the Mobile Era, published by UNESCO in partnership with Worldreader & Nokia

Published by UNESCO using data from Worldreader Mobile, this first-of-its-kind study provides the most detailed analysis to date of who reads books and stories on mobile devices in the developing world and why. Drawing on the analysis of over 4,000 surveys, and qualitative interviews collected from seven developing countries, the report’s primary findings include:

62% of respondents are reading more now that they can read on their mobile phones

6x the amount of time women read compared to men (207 minutes vs. 33 minutes per month)

1/3 of respondents said they read to children from their mobile phones
FACT: PEOPLE ARE READING BETTER

In a study from 2014, the percentage of students who could read significantly increased.

35.4% could read at least a word in 2013

91.1% could read at least a word in 2014

2014 KEY RESEARCH
Worldreader iREAD 2 Ghana Study

iREAD 2 was sponsored by an All Children Reading grant from USAID, World Vision and AusAID, and provided 574 Ghanaian first to third grade students and their teachers with e-readers filled with hundreds of books, improved teaching methodologies, and extracurricular reading activities. The final evaluation, our most rigorous piece of research to date, showed the following results over 18 months of project implementation:

2X increase in reading comprehension in both English and mother tongue

50% increase among students in measures of oral reading fluency

24 more words per minute read by students in English
Charles Madhara lives in a rural area of Zimbabwe, close to the village of Rusape. There is no electricity so residents use solar power as a source of energy. Charles is a 2nd grade teacher of 31 students between eight and nine years of age. Around 600 students attend the school where he teaches.

Charles discovered Worldreader Mobile when he was browsing the Internet on his feature phone. “It was the only place that offered free books.” Since discovering the Worldreader app, Charles has found it to be a powerful source of content for his classroom: “The children love it, I can read them new stories every day.” Charles also uses the Worldreader Mobile app to access essential health information, allowing him to discuss topics such as Ebola, HIV and sanitation with his students.

Charles is also studying for a Master’s Degree which he claims would not be possible without the digital books he accesses on his phone. “I use Worldreader Mobile to prepare for my Master’s because it is the only place I can obtain the right information when I do research for my assignments.”

“As a Zimbabwean educator at schools without libraries, reading short stories to my 2nd grade[r]s on my mobile makes a difference.”

- @charles_madhara
Every child deserves the right to an education. Sadly, approximately 80% of the world’s 70 million deaf people do not have any access to education and only 1-2% of the deaf receive education in sign language (WFD).

The boys and girls at the Kakamega School for the Deaf demonstrated the power of e-books to improve lives. During a BLUE Box (Building Literacy Using E-books) training at their local library, the students vividly brought each word to life through sign language to interpret the stories they were reading. They passionately read books from Worldreader’s Kiswahili library and became an inspiration to thousands of disabled children around the world. The students of the Kakamega School for the Deaf continue to expand their minds on a daily basis thanks to the e-readers in their community library.

Kenya
Thanks to a partnership with the UN Refugee Agency (UNHCR), 30,000 life-changing international and African e-books have been delivered to 2,300 students across four schools in the Mishamo and Katumba refugee settlements in Tanzania.

A new digital reading solution for Microsoft mobile phones developed in 2014 reached more than 15,000 readers with a digital library of 4,700 e-books in 44 languages. The mobile clients allowed for capturing of rich data and analytics as well as responsiveness to reader interests.

Education in STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics) is critical to technological innovation and economic growth. Thanks to the Cisco Foundation, we made 10,000 STEM books more ubiquitous.

RosettaBooks, an independent global publisher, donated 135 bestselling books to the Worldreader e-reader programs. As a part of the #WeReadBecause campaign during the holiday season, RosettaBooks also discounted 152 e-books and donated 10% of its proceeds to Worldreader.

400,000 digital books in libraries have impacted the lives of more than 10,000 people in the most rural parts of Western Kenya. With Worldreader’s Project LEAP supported by the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation, the libraries are experiencing a 178% increase in patronage rate.

Humble Bundle generously created book bundles that benefited Worldreader’s mission. Over $110,000 was raised in 2014 to help Worldreader expand its e-reader programs as well as acquire compelling and relevant digital content for our readers in the developing world.
15 MILLION READERS BY 2018
At the start of 2014, just four years after Worldreader was founded, we announced that our e-reading projects and reading app had reached 1 million readers across the globe. By the end of 2014, just a year later, Worldreader had already counted the next million readers with a total of 2.6 million people reached by our programs.

As we continue to work hard towards growing partnerships and maximizing efficiency, impact is top-of-mind. Over the past year, we’ve gathered our staff, board members and key stakeholders to answer the question: how many readers will Worldreader reach in the next three years? Here’s what we decided:

By 2018, Worldreader aims to reach 15,000,000 readers using e-readers in schools and libraries and mobile reading apps on peoples’ phones.

To do this, we’ve embarked on a major fundraising effort called “Reading into the Future” that will fuel four major initiatives over the next three years.

WHAT’S NEXT?

MORE BOOKS
Grow our digital library to include 50,000 books

MORE E-READERS
Reach 1M people with e-readers in schools and libraries

MORE APPS
Reach 14M people via free mobile reading phone apps

MORE POWER
Strengthen our team, infrastructure and expertise

At the foundation of this plan is the generosity of our donors, both those already listed in our annual report and those yet-to-be listed. As you consider your own support of Worldreader during 2015, we hope you will consider a special three-year commitment to help fund “Reading into the Future.”

DONOR OPPORTUNITIES

HOST A WORLDREADER EVENT
We are grateful to our supporters who help raise funds for Worldreader or help us spread the word about e-reading in the developing world. Large or small events are a great way to involve your friends and family with the cause.

SPONSOR A SCHOOL OR LIBRARY WITH A WORLDREADER BLUE BOX
Worldreader staff in Africa receive dozens of inquiries a month from schools and libraries in need of digital books. You can send 5,000 e-books via our BLUE (Building Literacy Using E-books) Box program to a school or library in Africa. Sponsor on your own, or join other donors via Worldreader Connect.

TRAVEL TO AFRICA WITH WORLDREADER
Experience our e-reading programs first hand by volunteering with us in Ghana for Vacation Reading School in August. Worldreader will help you craft an unforgettable trip for you and your family that will allow you to experience your philanthropy in action.

JOIN THE WORLDREADER BOOK CLUB
When you make a monthly donation to Worldreader you have the option to join the Worldreader Book Club! Each month, make a difference with us and experience the books our children love by receiving a free e-copy of one of our Indian or African bestsellers.

DEVELOPER? WEB-SAVVY? DONATE YOUR TIME AND SKILLS
Worldreader relies on dozens of volunteers who donate their time and skills pro-bono around the world. From developers to designers, proposal writers to publishing networkers, you can help our team expand and refine our work.
